

Social and Personal

The event of most interest to society in Richmond to-day will be the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, and Dr. John Woolfolk Burke, of Washington. The ceremony will take place in Holy Trinity Church this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Rev. J. J. Gravatt, rector of the church, officiating. There will be no reception, but the wedding is one of wide interest throughout the State, and there are a number of well known people here to attend the ceremony. Miss Atkinson will have as her bridesmaid, Mrs. Spencer L. Carter, of Baltimore, and the bridesmaids will include Misses Esther Burke, of Alexandria; Roberta Trigg, of Richmond; Sarah Hamilton, of Petersburg; and Mrs. Frank McCarthy, of this city. Taylor Burke, of Alexandria, will be his brother's best man, and the groomsmen will include Dr. Daniel Talley, Dr. James Pasco, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Dr. Spencer Bass, of North Carolina; Dr. Gaylord Clarke, of Baltimore; Julian Burke, Jr., Arthur Herbert, Dr. Charles B. Crawford, of Alexandria, and Thomas Atkinson, Jr.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Burke, of Alexandria. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and spent a number of years studying medicine in Berlin. Dr. and Mrs. Burke will reside in Washington, after a wedding journey.

At the Woman's Club. J. A. Primrose Whyte came again to the Woman's Club yesterday afternoon to tell them more of his Scotland, and right heartily did they receive him. "Scotland in Song and Story"—what a wealth of charming material from which to draw the theme for an afternoon, and what a bountiful feast did his audience find spread before them yesterday. Mr. Whyte is a very cultured and clever man, and his very soul and being seems permeated with the literature of his native country.

A fascinating Scotchman, he held his hearers enthralled, and they walked with Burns and Barrie through the heather, heard the music of the witches' dance by night and the wonderful love songs of a bonnie people. Mr. Whyte read several prose selections yesterday. He reads well and has a charm of manner and a subtle humor that spreads at once to his audience. Both the songs and the delightful humorous bits that he read were full of the gentle quaint touches of almost all the Scotch literature, and interspersed as they were with the groups of songs sung by Mr. Hester and Mrs. Thomas, the afternoon was one long to be remembered in the history of the club.

It is impossible to think of Scotch songs without at the same time thinking of Burns, the man who found the songs of Scotland unclean and left them pure, written as they were from a yeoman's heart with a yeoman's understanding. The songs of this land have entered the hearts of the people and no matter where one goes one finds them. They are known because of their fact that a great many of them contain a story, easily remembered, and compared with the lack of it in most of those of other nations. In addition to the story is the interest of a place, and place after place has been commemorated by Bobby Burns in his songs.

Twice in the afternoon did Mr. Whyte stop to pay tribute to Mary Johnston, "Cease Firing," and twice he quoted from memory striking passages in her novel. He made a story of it all, the ballads and songs of his people and the humor and quaint philosophy of the Scotchman, and he said that the lovers of the songs of Scotland made a great company that might come from the ends of the earth, for wherever the Scotchman has gone he has carried his song, and the influence of song is as wide and boundless as the sea.

He is a most distinguished man, and he gathered up every heart of them yesterday, when at the conclusion of his lecture his audience rose to him and sang "Auld Lang Syne."

German Friday. The Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity will give a German at the Richmond Hotel on Friday evening of this week at 8 o'clock. It will be a very brilliant event, and a great many out-of-town guests will be present. The guests will include the younger society set.

See Mrs. Draper. A great deal of entertaining has been done here recently in honor of Mrs. Thelma Polk Draper, of Youngtown, Ohio, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Charles Shields, here. Mrs. I.

Newton Vaughan, Jr., entertained at bridge-whist in Mrs. Draper's honor on Wednesday afternoon, and Thursday Mrs. Hattie Shields gave a small tea for her sister, Mrs. Elmore Hotchkiss gave a luncheon on Friday at her home in compliment to Mrs. Draper. The table was arranged with lavender flowers, and a big bouquet of Parma violets marked the places of the guests present. Covers were laid for twelve.

Lecture This Afternoon. Admiral Harrie Webster will lecture this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock before the members of the Art Club of Richmond and their friends. The lecture will be given at the Art Club, and Admiral Webster's subject is "The Present Status of Affairs in the East." The afternoon will be one of unusual interest, and tea will be served following the lecture.

Women to Meet. There are many women in Richmond who are much interested in the cause of Claude Allen, and the following resolutions have been drawn:

"Whereas, the execution of Claude Allen is set for December 13; and

"Whereas, His Excellency, Governor William Hodges Mann, has signed his willingness to hear appeals for a commutation of this sentence from death to imprisonment; and

"Whereas, we feel that justice does not require the death of this young man for defending his father, and that a less severe penalty in his case would uphold the majesty of the law and secure the approval of the public conscience;

"Therefore, we, the undersigned, earnestly urge the women of Richmond who favor executive clemency for Claude Allen to meet in the new auditorium of the Richmond Hotel, Ninth and Grace Streets, Tuesday, November 26, 1912, at 4 o'clock."

At the meeting this afternoon R. C. Stearnes, Dr. George W. McDaniel and Judge William F. Rhea will lay the case before those present.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white crepe meteor with a tulle veil, and carried a white prayerbook. She was attended by Miss Eva Wasserman as maid of honor. Miss Wasserman wore a pale blue silk gown and carried pink flowers. Mrs. H. H. NO LEGAL RIGHT TO COLLECT MONEY

Counsel for Police Justice Brown Argue That He Cannot Be Accused of Embezzling.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) Newport News, Va., November 25.—Counsel for Police Justice J. D. G. Brown, charged with embezzling public funds collected as fines due the State, sprung a surprise when the case was called to-day by arguing that the police justice cannot be accused of embezzling money which he had no legal right to collect. The city charter specifically provides that all fines and moneys collected in the Police Court shall be collected by the Chief of Police and by him turned over to the City Treasurer. The Chief of Police always has collected city fines, but the State fines have been collected by the Police Justice and by him turned over to the State.

The contention of the defense, took the State completely by surprise, and Commonwealth's Attorney Berkeley asked for a continuance of the case until to-morrow, so that he could reply to the contention of counsel for the defense.

EMPEROR WILLIAM VISITS SYNAGOGUE

Artistic Tiles Made by Pottery Works on His Estate Used in Construction.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

EMPEROR WILLIAM paid his first visit to a Jewish place of worship to the other day, spending more than an hour in the new synagogue on the Fasanenstrasse, in the Charlottenburg suburb of Berlin.

He was there, however, not in his capacity as sovereign, but as proprietor and very active director of the pottery works on his private estate of Cadzand.

Artistic tiles produced at the Cadzand works have been very extensively used in the construction of the synagogue, and the Emperor wished to judge of the results—the contract having been a large one.

On leaving the synagogue he drove off to the Zoological Gardens to inspect the site for the two large fountains of Cadzand pottery which the Zoological Gardens authorities have ordered from Cadzand. No wonder that the other pottery concerns complain of unfair competition, declaring that no matter how meritorious their manufactures, they can never hope to get such wonderful advertising as the Cadzand potteries do through their imperial proprietor.

Count Botho Eulenburg's death has not received the attention abroad that it deserves. For he was Minister of the Interior at Berlin under Bismarck, also Prime Minister of Prussia after the prince's downfall and was appointed by the Kaiser to the office of Chancellor of the empire in succession to General Count Caprivi. The Emperor, however, was induced to withdraw the appointment by his uncle, the late Grand Duke of Baden, who entertained the most pronounced aversion for the entire Eulenburg family.

The Emperor thereupon expressed his intention of bestowing upon Count Botho Eulenburg, the governor-generalship of Alsace-Lorraine. But here again the Grand Duke of Baden stood in the way, with the result that the count retired into private life.

Botho Eulenburg's career was a somewhat curious one. For while leading the right in the Prussian legislature, he managed to win the warm sympathy of the left, and while acting as Bismarck's Minister of the Interior he ran counter to his policy by insisting on reforms, looking forward to the day when the liberal Crown Prince Frederick would succeed to the throne.

But Bismarck on realizing this got rid of Eulenburg in his own characteristic fashion. One day he sent him submitted to the legislature a measure for which he demanded the approval of the House. To his amazement, an ordinary member of the House, Bismarck, then Premier of Prussia, approved the bill. Eulenburg replied in the affirmative, whereupon another ordinary member arose, solemnly denied the correctness of the statement, and then read a letter from the Chancellor himself to the effect that he had nothing whatever to do with the bill and was strongly disapproved of it. This was a masterpiece of political tactics, and his colleagues had of the fact that the Chancellor had changed his mind about the matter, and there was nothing left for them to do but to resign at once.

When after the fall of Bismarck Botho Eulenburg was appointed Premier by the present Emperor, it was naturally expected that he would at once undertake the reconstruction of the Reichstag, which Minister of the Interior. But instead of that he distinguished himself by his reactionary policy and by his animosity towards the new Chancellor, Count von Helldorf, who had been greatly contributed to by the late Grand Duke of Baden, who had been in warm sympathy with all the liberal ideas of his brother-in-law, Emperor Frederick, and who was also fond of Count Botho Eulenburg.

At one moment the Eulenburgs were on terms of warm friendship with the Bismarcks. Indeed, Count Botho's younger brother, Wend, was betrothed to Prince Bismarck's only daughter, Marie. Three days before the wedding, however, Count Botho Eulenburg was suddenly stricken with typhus fever and forty-eight hours later succumbed to the malady. Countess Marie, it may be added, afterwards married Count von Helldorf, former German minister to The Hague, after having been between times engaged to Admiral von Eiseudecker, once German envoy at Washington.

Another brother of the late Count Botho Eulenburg is General Count Augustus von Eulenburg, who is minister of the royal house at Berlin, and who, since the accession of the Kaiser, has been the grand marshal of the court and its chief comptroller. Of all the dignitaries of the court of Berlin he is the one who has enjoyed the greatest degree of intimacy, confidence and favor on the part of the sovereign and his consort. Tactful, resourceful and sympathetic, he possesses an unrivaled knowledge of everything relating to the court, and of the Emperor's views, prejudices and idiosyncrasies. The influence which he wields is enormous. For it is he who issues all invitations to court, and through his hands pass all applications for audiences.

The intimacy between Count Augustus Eulenburg and the Emperor dates from the latter's earliest boyhood. He was one of those officials whom Prince Bismarck forced upon the then crown prince and crown princess in order to counteract their liberal influences upon their eldest son, and he became the mentor and guide of William, imparting to him all the extensive experiences of the intricacies of court life and of Berlin society.

As minister of the imperial house, Count Augustus, who is a titular general of the Army, holds the supreme dignity of the court, but the administrator of the entire crown domains and of all the vast possessions and estates of the reigning family. He forms part of the Prussian Cabinet, and his authority extends over every branch of the imperial and royal establishments. On the occasion of royal marriages, births and deaths he officiates as grand notary, and it is he who has charge of all the archives of the royal house of Hohenzollern.

At Vienna the office of minister of the imperial house is associated with that of Minister of Foreign Affairs and of the de facto Chancellor of the dual empire. But at Berlin the minister of the royal house finds his hands sufficiently full in managing his own department, embracing as it does not only the management of the household and the direction of all palaces, parks, forests, mines, manufactories, commercial undertakings, horse-breeding establishments, ironworks, etc., belonging to the house of Hohenzollern.

Perhaps the best thing that can be said about Count Augustus is that he has managed for thirty years or more to retain undisturbed and undiminished the friendship and confidence of no able, and brilliant a man as the Emperor, also of the Empress, and the affection of all their children as well as of the general approval of all classes of the population. It is only very rarely that he is in any way connected with a young branch of the family.

The Eulenburgs are one of the most ancient families in Germany. Already in the twelfth century they were nobles. They have always been connected with court life and for the last three hundred years with the house of Hohenzollern. They are, as a rule, charming companions, always cheerful, good-humored and smiling. They smile is a subtle form of flattery, and with them to say and do what is pleasing to the ears and eyes of their de facto sovereign is a matter of instinct. Time always seems to pass pleasantly when they are within hail, and their savoir faire is quite delightful. There is an old saying in Prussia, "clever as the Eulenburgs," while in Southern Germany and in Austria it is asserted that they are the only living Prussians who have good manners. One thing is undoubted, namely, that the Eulenburgs are the only Prussian family of closest intimacy and with whom he ever really unbends and forgets that he is a monarch.

Why French Women Always Look Young

("Aurilia," in Society World.) In France mothers and daughters look like sisters. I tried to find out how the women were able to retain their youthful looks until long past middle age. I learned that they were much given to the use of marcolized wax. This wax possesses a remarkable absorbing property, which quickly removes the fine particles of cuticle which are constantly dying, and which are the immediate cause of an old-looking complexion. Thus the livelier, healthier, younger skin beneath is given a chance to breathe and show itself. I've tried this treatment myself. In less than two weeks my complexion has become as clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. Just one ounce of marcolized wax (all Corner drugists have it) did the work. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings.

Another valuable secret I learned from the French was how to quickly remove wrinkles. One ounce of powdered marcolized wax dissolved in a half-pint of water makes a marvellously effective astringent lotion. The face should be bathed in this daily until the deepest lines have entirely disappeared. (Advertisement.)
